

WAR IN UKRAINE >

U.S. provided intelligence that helped Ukraine sink Russian warship

The Russian missile cruiser Moskva anchored in Sevastopol in 2008. (AP)

The United States provided Ukraine with intelligence that helped Kyiv identify, attack and sink the flagship of Russia's Black Sea fleet, the Moskva, in one of the most dramatic battlefield successes of the 71-day old war, according to people familiar with the matter.

By Shane Harris, Paul Sonne, Dan Lamothe and Michael Birnbaum

LIVE

Official: Besieged Mariupol steel plant in 'critical' situation

- A disaster response expert reflects on health of Ukraine's refugees
- An open-ended war forces one Ukrainian city to reinvent itself
- Ukraine says Russia is stealing grain, which could worsen food crisis
- Western city warns of shelling ahead of Russian Victory Day holiday

President of Belarus, a Russia ally, didn't expect war to 'drag on'

By Ellen Francis and Claire Parker

Russian oligarch's $300 million yacht seized by Fiji on behalf of U.S.

By Annabelle Timsit and Timothy Bella

Ukraine says Russia is stealing grain, which could worsen food crisis

By Claire Parker

WJ EXCLUSIVE

Oligarch's effort to broker peace falters even as it shields him from sanctions

By Greg Miller and Shira Rubin

OPINIONS >

Raising feminist sons seemed easy. A daughter? Much trickier.

Opinion by Kate Cohen

Why such a lack of compassion on student debt?

Opinion by Christine Emba

Lack of a federal privacy law opens the door to dystopia

Opinion by the Editorial Board

Russia's assault on Ukraine is entwined with a religious war

Opinion by David Ignatius

ROE V. WADE >

The Fix Analysis

Why Democrats probably won't banish filibuster for abortion

Memories of pre-Roe America, from people who were there

The period was defined by stigma around sex, as well as limited access to contraception and abortions for women.

OPINIONS >

The abortion ruling may help Republicans

Opinion by Marc A. Thiessen

Jackson must wonder what she has gotten

